The Economies Of Argentina And Brazil: A Comparative Perspective

An essay over our understanding of the economies of Argentina and Brazil's comparative perspective has led me to review the various sources of growth and economic performance within each country. Yet it managed to develop a broader-based economy than Argentina and grew faster. Between 1929 and 1975 Australian income per person increased at an average annual rate of 0.96%, compared with 0.07% in Brazil. It provides important insights into the structure of the economy, why Argentina and Brazil have developed.

Economist Monitor - Why Argentina still matters

"In the Doing Business report for 2018 — which takes data up to June 2017 — Argentina is ranked 117th out of 190 economies. There is a lot of room for improvement." Improving business environments is a critical component to alleviating poverty.
